

Stand, Speak, Deliver!

Public speaking ranks in the top ten of peoples greatest fears in most such surveys. There is even a name for it - glossophobia. The best way to improve your public speaking is to actually do it - to practice, whenever you can, to whatever size of audience. The next best way is to observe how others do it - in speeches, whether live or on video. Now here is a new way. Uniquely, this book delivers the essentials of public speaking in the form of short speeches, 37 of them. Most of these have already been delivered - and videoed - to a live audience by the author, a speaker with a quarter century of experience in speaking - and entertaining. This book gives you the public speaking tips that matter, those that make the difference. And it delivers them in a witty and lively manner.
