

The Brand New Catastrophe

Winner of the Center for Fictions Doheny Prize, a raucous family memoir meets medical adventure in this heartfelt, hilarious book exploring the public and private theaters of illness. After a ruptured pituitary tumor leaves Mike Scalise with the hormone disorder acromegaly at age 24, he must navigate a new, alien world of illness maintenance. His mother, who has a chronic heart condition and a flair for drama, serves as a complicated model as she competes with him for the status of best sick person. A moving, funny exploration of how we define ourselves by the stories we choose to tell. Mike Scalise's work has appeared in The New York Times, The Wall Street Journal, Agni, Indiewire, The Paris Review Daily, and elsewhere. He has received fellowships and scholarships from Bread Loaf, Yaddo, the Ucross Foundation, and was the Philip Roth Writer in Residence at Bucknell University. He lives in Brooklyn, New York.
